

Back to School in the Riviera Maya

Back to the HomePage

In september, many Mexican schools go back to school from summer break. In this area, there are several major schools going back, and this has drastically changed traffic and mobility within the cities. Sit back and relax while reading. Today, we are going to talk about this, and more, on your Daily News.

Schools reopen, less traffic?

In recent years, we have seen an increase of visitors and traffic during the summer here in the Riviera Maya. The conclusion is obvious. While there are more tourists in summer, there are also way more school kids that have summer vacation. They come from all over the country with their families to have a great vacation in the tropical Riviera Maya. Once the school starts back up, many families will go back because their kids have to go to school, and we see the roads clear up. This isn't just true for travelers though, but also for locals. Once many kids go back to school, waterparks and amusement park will get less full. As well as the parks, so will the beaches.

The beaches are full!

The beaches in the Riviera Maya are some of the most beautiful beaches in the world. Millions of tourists go and visit these every single year. But if there is more people, there is also more pollution and more chance of someone getting hurt. In the summer, many beaches are crowded and polluted because of the trash so many people leave at the beach. "The city is actively working on this", says the mayor. As we heard the city is trying to work on solutions for this problem, as it gets worse and worse.
